Fall Conference Of P-TA Is Held Yesterday At College

Misses Pat and Phyllis Meacham, identical twins from Hopkinsville, were the recipients of the Scholarship award given by the First District of the Kentucky Branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers at the thirty-third annual fall conference held at Murray State College on Thursday, October 5.

The twin girls are elementary education majors at Murray State College. Rev. A. C. Morrison, district scholarship chairman, made the award with Miss Rubie Smith, assistant professor of education at Murray State College, announcing the names of the award.

Mrs. Erl Sensing of Clinton, first district president, presided at the meeting which convened in the college auditorium at 10 a.m.

The main address was given by Mrs. Karl Bader, president of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers. She said the main purpose of the PTA is to educate for the welfare of the children and youth and that it is in the home that the future citizen is shaped. "The image of PTA, begins with you," Mrs. Bader said.

Dr. Ralph H. Woods, president of Murray State, gave the invocation with the salute to the flag led by Danny Kelly, member of the Murray Branch ACE, the host for the day.

Jackie Washer Is Basketball Queen At College High

The welcome was given by Miss Carol Byars, ACE president, followed by the response by Mrs. John O. Passo of Murray, first district secretary.

Mrs. Charles Clark of Murray is first district program chairman. Awards were made to the various PTA units including the special Twin Oaks Honor Award for having every parent or guardian and every teacher a member of the PTA to the Barlow Unit.

Announcement was made of the state PTA convention to be held in Paducah in April 1962. The Paducah Council extended an invitation for the spring conference to be held at Paducah Tilghman High School.

German Train Wrecks, Many Are Killed

By CAY BROCKDORFF
HAMBURG, Germany (UPI)—A speeding electric elevated train crammed with passengers rumbled into a parked work train loaded with a 20-ton steel girder Thursday night, causing one of the worst rail disasters in recent German history.

Fire department officials supervising the rescue work counted at least 25 dead among a tangled mass of human remains.

At least 48 others were injured, some so seriously that surgeons performed on-the-spot amputations at the wreck scene.

The bodies were so badly mangled that the dead were counted only by heads. The 45-foot girder, projecting from the work train, sliced through the middle of the passenger train like a kitchen knife cutting ripe fruit.

Rescue workers labored through the night cutting bodies and survivors out of the twisted wreckage.

Gerhard Hoelzl, a senior Fire Department official, said the bodies had been so mangled "we many never know how many persons were killed."

The passenger train was jammed with movie theater fans.

There was no immediate explanation why the work train was parked on the track which is heavily traveled by suburban trains. Officials said the passenger train rumbled into the work train at full speed.

The front cabin, passengers and seats of the front coach were smashed 30 feet to the rear.

Woods' collision took place on a 30-foot bridge spanning a canal leading to Hamburg's overseas port.

A police launch began dragging the bodies for passengers who had been jumped or been thrown overboard by the impact.

Police said switchman Alfred Messer, 56, was being held for questioning about the accident.

They said Messer was in charge of the track when the trains rumbled.

Hoelzl said, "I have never seen a more horrible sight."

The J. H. Churchill Funeral Home Will Observe Event

The J. H. Churchill Funeral Home is observing 75 years of service to the people of Murray and Calloway County on Sunday, October 8. The funeral home was founded on October 8, 1886 by J. H. Churchill.

The funeral home has an advertisement in today's issue of the Ledger and Times calling attention to their years of service.

Ronald W. Churchill, son of the founder, is the present owner of the funeral home.

Churchill said today that during the 75 years of its existence "The J. H. Churchill Funeral Home has received the confidence of the people of Murray and Calloway County, for which we are most grateful."

The funeral home moved into new quarters in recent months and is now located on the east corner of the intersection of Third and Maple streets. For many years it was located on the west corner of the same intersection. Prior to that time in its early years, it was located on the court square.

Mr. Churchill has been highly active in community affairs, holding positions of responsibility in several facets of public life. He served on the City School Board for nine years and was Master of Murray Lodge F&AM 105 in 1928. He was president of the Murray Rotary Club in 1939 and president of the Murray Chamber of Commerce on two different occasions, 1932 and again for a three year period 1956 to 1958. At the present time he is on the Chamber board and is a member of the Murray Planning Commission.

As a part of this community I am pleased to further the promotion and welfare of the community and its economic growth," he said.

Five Of Ten Top Pointmakers In NBA Will Play Here Tuesday

Five of the National Basketball Association's top pointmakers last season will be aiming at opposite buckets next Tuesday when the St. Louis Hawks and Cincinnati Royals clash at the MSC sports arena in a pre-season contest.

Tip-off time for the professional cage match is scheduled at 8:00 p.m.

St. Louis, defending champs of the Western Division, boasted three of the leading scorers for the 1960-61 race. The trio consisted of Bob Pettit, Cliff Hagan and Clyde Lovellette, who have been dubbed by "Hawk" fans as "The Unmatchables."

The fabulous Big O, Oscar Robertson, and Jack Twyman were Cincinnati's representatives on the scorers' honor roll.

Skyscraping Wilt Chamberlain, of course, led all NBA performers with a record-smashing 38.3 average per game. In 79 outings the Stilt connected for 3,033 points to become the first player in NBA history to hit the 3,000-point plateau. Runner-up laurels went to Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles who made 2,538 markers and averaged 34.8.

Robertson, climaxing a brilliant rookie season, came in third with 2,165 points in 71 games for a healthy 30.5 medial. From the field the 6-5 guard ate sank over 47 per cent of his tosses, and enjoyed an 82.2 accuracy at the free throw line.

A three-time AU-American hero while playing at the University of Cincinnati, Robertson was also a defensive and playmaking specialist for the Royals. He ousted veteran Bob Cousy of Boston as the leader in assists being credited with 716, and also picked off 10 stray shots each contest.

Twyman trailed both Robertson and Pettit, who was No. 4 in scoring. A deadly marksman from anywhere on the planks, Twyman rimmed 1,997 counters to average 25.3. In addition, the 6-6 vet of five pro seasons was second behind Chamberlain in field goal percentages. Chamberlain was tops with a 50.5 figure, and Twyman had 48.8 per cent.

For the seventh straight year Pettit won the Hawks' scoring title. As the fourth best in the league, he sank 2,120 points to sport a 27.9 average. Teammates Hagan (1,763 and 24.8 avg.) and Lovellette (1,147 and 21.9 avg.) were 12th and 15th, respectively, in total production.

The Pettit-Hagan-Lovellette combine is the highest scoring "front line" in NBA history. Together they accounted for about 71 points each time the Hawks took the floor. Furthermore, Pettit was third in rebounding behind Chamberlain and Boston's Bill Russell, snaring over 29 per tilt.

In recent pre-season games with Philadelphia, all three Hawk standouts have been consistently bombarding the nets. "It's a steady habit they have," a Hawk fan quipped.

Tickets for the Hawks-Cincinnati game are now on sale.

Hearing Set For Trailer Park In City

A hearing has been set for October 17 at 4:00 p. m. by the Murray Board of Zoning Adjustment on a request by H. T. Waldrop, local realtor, to establish a mobile trailer court on Chestnut street.

The court will be for a client of Mr. Waldrop and not Mr. Waldrop himself.

The land under consideration for this use is located on the south side of Chestnut street and includes two parcels. One lot is 150 feet wide and 405 feet deep and is located just west of the Ellis Pump and Pipe Company. The other is 73 feet wide and 635 feet deep and is located just east of Tabers Body Shop. Only 405 feet of the 635 feet is being considered since this part of the lot lies in a Business-2 zoning district. The rest of this lot is in Residential-2 and is not being considered.

Waldrop said that a modern mobile trailer court is being considered with ample space between trailers, proper sewerage connections and water connections. The city sewerage system will be used since the operation lies east of the sewerage lift station.

The hearing will be held in the city council room of the city hall at 4:00 p. m. Anyone interested in this project is asked to be present at that time. The Board of Zoning Adjustment has not made a decision concerning the request for the establishment of the mobile trailer court, and will not until after the hearing.

The zoning ordinance allows the trailer park in a Business-2 area when approved by the Board of Zoning Adjustment after a public hearing and when it is designed, used and maintained in conformity with any conditions specified in the approval.

Little Hope Is Held For Sam Rayburn

By BRYCE MILLER
DALLAS, Tex. (UPI)—House Speaker Sam Rayburn, 79, who is dying of cancer, looked a little better today than he did Thursday and his doctor said he was not under sedation.

"There is very little change in his general condition," a bulletin issued by doctors at 11 a.m. EDT said.

"He is still serious, but not critical. He is resting comfortably."

President Kennedy urged the nation to offer its prayers with him for the veteran speaker, known as "Mr. Democrat" to millions, who dedicated his life to serving and guiding the federal government.

Surgeons at Baylor University Medical Center removed a lymph gland from Rayburn's groin Thursday and discovered the malignancy.

Officially, the hospital declined to state that death is imminent. But the hopelessness of the case was indicated in the final five words of the latest medical bulletin:

"No further surgery is anticipated."

Rayburn was kept under heavy sedation following the removal of the lymph gland and was not told that he had cancer. A hospital spokesman said he would be told only if he demanded to know what was wrong with him.

Relatives Told Diagnosis

Teens grieved the news of Mrs. W. A. Thomas of Dallas and Mrs. Robert Barley of Bonham, Tex., Rayburn's sisters, when doctors told them the diagnosis. A friend said they were resigned to it.

One of the physicians in charge of the diagnostic study said cancer started in the pancreas and spread to the lymph glands. Doctors working on the case asked that their names not be used.

A radiologist close to Rayburn's doctor said this type of cancer is the worst kind.

"There is no cure...no wonder drugs for this and they can't cut it out because it is spread through his body," the doctor said. "It could be treated and probably arrested if it was localized, but it is in everything."

"They didn't cut him open to look anywhere else because there is no use. They know the body is giving up. Everything just from the standpoint of finding it in the lymph node of the groin."

WHO PAYS FOR SOCIALISM?

PRESIDENT KENNEDY has been busy signing quite a number of laws passed in the last hours of Congress, among them one to close what Senator Byrd of Virginia regards as the biggest loop-hole in the income tax law since it was passed way back in 1913.

It is a bill to provide a number for every person covered by the income tax law. And that takes in everybody who gets any income from any source. Internal Revenue Service wanted this law passed, to speed up book-keeping by using machines to replace human labor—a hated device throughout the industry—and to collect taxes on income not now being reported.

Senator Byrd says the government will increase its revenue five billion dollars a year by using numbers to spot chiselers, and we presume practically all of this additional tax revenue will come from lower-income workers.

Thus, it seems, the New Frontier learned an important lesson in eight months that it took the New Deal more than eight years to learn—that there is more tax revenue in lower income brackets than in high ones.

As a matter of fact personal exemptions were not reduced by the New Deal from $2,000 to an unprecedented low of $500 until we entered World War Two. It was even then "for the duration only," but no session of Congress has dared raise the personal exemption since, despite the increased cost of living and promises of most every candidate to do so.

Some day the millions who toil for a living will learn they are the ones who always pay the cost of unemployment benefits, welfare, pensions and everything else, also those who promise to raise them must tax them most.

We favor closing loop-holes of all sorts. We also favor honesty and thrift. We are opposed to increased taxes under any guise until an honest effort is made to reduce waste, and to enforce existing laws against theft and fraud.

GAIN OR LOSS?

IT SEEMS army rebels in Syria have won their revolution against Nasser and will hereafter be independent of the United Arab Republic. Nasser gained control some years ago with our support over the protest of three of our closest allies, England, France and Israel, all of which had interests in the Suez Canal which were as important to them as our interest in the Panama Canal in this hemisphere.

We didn't like the idea of helping Nasser form the UAR any more than we liked the moral, economic and military aid we gave Fidel Castro to overthrow the Batista regime in Cuba. But we liked it better than the Communist Party which is to replace Nasser rule. The shift is another gain for international communism.

Whether it is a loss for us depends upon one's point of view. Those who still support the choice made by the New Deal at Yalta, and the Fair Deal at Potsdam, can claim a distinct victory on the same order as those in Korea, Cuba, Laos, the Congo and elsewhere, but we never liked "Good Old Ide." We like Khrushchev a great deal less because he is so much smarter.

With active, aggressive, impudent organizations in every country on the globe, including the United States, it makes us wonder whether our survival in a nuclear fission war would be desirable. Against Communism, even where Communism is not a threat of subversion and darkness there are active underground "cells" ready to take advantage of every opportunity to provoke riots and to discredit existing governments, and to throw support to rebels anywhere, to promote the cause of human slavery and the destruction of individual freedom and dignity.

OLD YANKEE CUSTOM — Yankee long-ball hitters provided the punch that beat the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the 1961 World Series at New York. With catcher Elston Howard, shown crossing the plate with the first run in the fourth inning to be greeted by first baseman Bill Skowron after planting a homer into the right field stands, Skowron provided the only other score of the opening game in the sixth, driving a homer into the left field stands to make up the final score, 2-to-0, Yankees.

Joey Jay's Pitching And Mistakes Of The Yankees Gives Cincinnati Win Yesterday

By FRED DOWN — United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was Joey Jay's pitching and Yankee mistakes.

They told the story of the Cincinnati Reds' 6-2 triumph over the New York Yankees in the second game of the World Series Thursday—a game that tied the Series at one game each and sent the clubs on their way to Cincinnati for the third game Saturday.

Jay doled out only four hits to the Yankees and struck out six batters—including home run king Roger Maris twice—with men on bases. He missed a shutout only because of a two-run homer by Yogi Berra in the fourth inning. Yogi's 12th home run in Series competition.

But even Jay's brilliant hurling will be overshadowed when historians look back on this game by the spectacle of sloppy fielding by the usually flawless Yankees.

Boyer Muffs Grounder
Glove artist Clete Boyer muffed a grounder at third, Berra, playing left field, committed a three-base error; relief ace Luis Arroyo made a two-base wild throw; and worst of all, catcher Elston Howard looked elsewhere as Cincinnati's Elio "Chacon" scored on a passed ball.

The game started as a duel between Jay and Yankee right-hander Ralph Terry. But Terry, who tossed Bill Matroski, the home run ball that beat the Yankees in the last game of last year's World Series, had no better luck this time.

Boyer's muff let Frank Robinson reach first in the fourth inning, and Gordon Coleman followed with a home run to make it 2-0—a 380-foot drive that just barely cleared the fence in the right-center bleachers. The Yankees wiped out that lead in the same inning when Maris walked and Berra lofted his homer 20 rows deep into the lower right field stands.

Chacon Races Home

With two out in the fifth, Chacon pipped a looping single into center and then raced to third on Eddie Kasko's ground single through the middle. When Howard let a low pitch by Terry get away from him, Chacon broke for home and Kasko for second.

Howard retrieved the ball and gazed at Kasko streaking for second. Terry was slow breaking off the mound. Howard finally saw Chacon, made a desperate lunge, but was too late to tag him at the plate.

The Yankees put two men on in the last of the fifth, but Jay did his best pitching of the day—fanning Tony Kubek and Maris to end the threat.

With two out in the sixth, Wally Post of the Reds doubled into the left corner. Gene Freese was purposely passed, but John Edwards grounded a single to right to score Post and make it 4-2.

Terry Goes Out

Terry went out for a pinch-hitter, but the Reds added two more runs in the eighth off Arroyo to wrap up the game.

Arroyo walked Robinson. Coleman topped the ball in front of the plate for a single. Arroyo's desperate throw to first sailed wildly, scoring Robinson, but Coleman was out trying to reach third.

Post then fled to Berra, but Yogi lost the ball in the surf and it went through him for an error.

Post ran to third. Freese again was purposely passed and again Edwards delivered, this time a double over the drawn-in infield to score Post.

Then Jay wrapped it up.

CAUGHT THAT 61ST—Sal Durante, 19, Coney Island, N.Y., is shown with Yankee slugger Roger Maris in Yankee Stadium as he returns the ball Maris hit for his 61st home run of the season. Sal said he stood up on seat and made the catch.

LEADERSHIP...

SINCE 1886

75 Years of Service

OCTOBER 8, 1886

OCTOBER 8, 1961

During the 75 years of its existence The J. H. Churchill Funeral Home has received the confidence of the people of Murray and Calloway County, to all of whom we are most grateful.

During these 75 years we have weathered depressions, wars, shortages, personnel changes and other adverse conditions, but at no time have we ever compromised with quality. And, we will not compromise today, or tomorrow.

We have one business and one purpose — a more complete service with Reverence, Sincerity, Dignity, and Economy.

As more modern equipment and facilities have made themselves available, we have kept abreast of the times. We say "the past is only the prologue".

We fully realize that we could not have become successful without both old and new friends. We are thankful and express our deepest appreciation to all.

As we enter our 76th year, we pledge to you, our friends, our fullest cooperation, a dedication to our business, and an unswerving devotion toward our goal — the best in funeral services.

It has been our great privilege to grow with the City of Murray and Calloway County and to make some contribution toward its growth.

We pledge a continued interest, a revival of effort, and a renewal of our principals of fair dealing with the public.

DONALD BARR CHIDSEY'S New Historical Entertainment THE WICKEDEST PILGRIM

CHAPTER 16

CAPTAIN Miles Standish shot a duck one day, but he ate it himself. There was not a morsel of fresh meat for the scurvy patients, who numbered fourteen, crammed into a dim bay that was located forward in the Mayflower, just below the galley. Sal Boyd, lacking other duties, often helped to nurse these men and women.

All talk was of the next journey of exploration, which would set forth the following day, as soon as the shallop was launched and rigged, and which would be under orders not to return without a site.

This trip must be decisive. The plan was to explore the whole inside of the bay, if necessary, but in particular to examine the place that John Smith had designated on his map as New Plymouth. The longboat was about to start back for shore, and the men who were going on this trip were getting their gear aboard it. Sal Boyd had no gear, but he knew he'd be going, and he would be ready. He had borrowed a whetstone, and now he sat in the waist, slowly, lovingly putting a razor edge on his knife. "A razor need real men on this point."

"It ought to go through red skin just the same as any other kind," he reminded, holding the knife high for Miles Standish to see.

The Captain had been about to take his place in the boat. He paused looking down at Sal. "You know, Boyd, maybe I shouldn't be the one to tell you this—"

"Tell me what?"

"I wanted you. I asked especially for you. But—Well, certain others in the company decided that you'd be of more use here aboard the ship."

Sal sprang to his feet.

"What's that you're saying, man? You're not trying to tell me that I'm to be kept back here like a woman?"

"I'm afraid that's the way it's going to be, Boyd." He put a hand on Sal's shoulder. "You're a soldier, Boyd. Be one. I know it's hard, but—well."

"Sure," muttered Sal. "Well."

He turned away, smacking his dagger back. He didn't watch as the longboat was pushed off. He felt a little sick, and he was afraid that his eyes might be wet. Nobody should see him that way.

It was a raw morning, the sky was low, the wind high, and an icy snow-rain sifted the air. Nobody but a fool would be out in weather like this, if he didn't have to. After the longboat had gone the waist was strangely quiet, all but deserted.

Sal wandered about aimlessly, kicking things.

He went down all the way to the lower hold where the barrels were.

It was neat. He snooped, nodding approval. The light was poor, a mere filtering from above, but his hands told him that everything was in order, each barrel tight, the air space carefully kept.

A keg was on its side in the middle of the cleared space where John Alden probably did most of his work. Beside it on the deck was a small iron tube that coopered call a straw. It was a testing device.

If they wanted to know what a given barrel contained, all they needed to do was to put it on its side, work out the stopper, and sniff. However, in the case of beer, if they wanted to learn whether it was going sour, an important consideration in what should be moved down here, the surest way was by sucking some of it up through this "straw."

But this couldn't be beer. It was too small a container.

Sal went to it, unplugged it, put his nose down.

There was no mistaking the odor of Hollands gin. Sal frowned. He took up the straw and thrust it into the hole and gave himself a good, long, burning drink. He smacked his lips, while his eyes started to smart.

Since that last night in Plymouth, when it had played him false, Sal Boyd had known no gin. Aboard Mayflower he'd confined his drinking to the ship's beer, a thin, weak, watery stuff that even almost had been water. Now the Hollands tasted good. He took another drink.

He let it frolic inside, as he nodded knowingly.

He was not stealing anything. This was not ship's property, it was company's property, and Sal could always partake of the common fund.

Sal put the plug back—no use letting the stuff evaporate—but after a while he worked it out again and took another drink, just a small one.

He sat on the keg, patting on his knees. He was beginning to wonder whether he ought to feel ashamed of himself.

He thought about this for a while.

He took another drink.

his elbows to avoid it, but he didn't lift them fast enough. Blood spurting from his nose, streaming not over his mouth, he was slammed back against a barrel.

He went right in again, head down, both arms swinging. He was hit twice, once over each ear. He fell like a tree.

He knew that he was on the deck. But he couldn't do anything about it. He could not even move.

He assumed that Alden would jump on him with both heavy boots and stamp out his consciousness, along with a good deal of his skin. Sal couldn't help that. He just had to lie and wait for it to happen.

While Sal blinked, dumfounded, his bloody mouth open, the hatch was slammed.

This much Sal knew: John Alden was afraid of him. Alden had attacked in a moment of rage, and now he trembled to think of what he had done—and what might be the consequences.

Was this because Alden was physically afraid of him? It seemed unlikely. The cooper was taller and somewhat heavier, and the way he had punched Sal told him that he knew how to use his fists.

On the other hand, Sal Boyd, though only a few years older, had behind him all the dread prestige of piracy. Almost anything might be expected of a man who had served with the Saltee rovers.

There was another possible explanation, and Sal quaked to think of it, wishing that he could believe it.

John Alden might have passed to realize he had knocked down—could he have reasoned thus?—one of the most popular person aboard the Mayflower, a man who had a host of friends.

It would be almost like knocking down the skipper, thought Sal—laboring—indeed, in many ways worse, for nobody liked Christopher Jones. Similarly, there were few who cared for the surly cooper.

Not consciously but as a matter of course he decided that he would not go after John Alden. He certainly would not apologize, he wouldn't ask for more. The other-sides behavior might be all right for such as Elder Brewster, but in Sal Boyd it would have smacked of cowardice, an emotion Sal couldn't afford. But he would drop the matter, publicly. And if the cooper renewed hostilities—well, Sal would be steadier the next time, better prepared.

A more trying ordeal is yet to come for Sal Boyd. The story continues tomorrow.
